

Mîzân – Studien zur Literatur in der islamischen Welt Studies in the literatures of the Islamic world

Herausgegeben von / edited by

Catharina Dufft, Goulia Ghardashkhani, Stephan Guth, Roxane Haag-Higuchi, & Börte Sagaster

Die ehemals von Petra Kappert herausgegebene orientalistisch-literaturwissenschaftliche Reihe Mîzân des Wiesbadener Harrassowitz Verlages wird von C. Dufft, G. Ghardashkhani, S. Guth, R. Haag-Higuchi und B. Sagaster weitergeführt. Die Reihe versteht sich als Forum für Studien zur klassischen und modernen Literatur, aber auch für Arbeiten im Bereich volksliterarischer Formen und anderer narrativer Medien in arabischer, persischer und türkischer Sprache.

Mîzân, the series of studies in the literatures of the Islamic World founded by Petra Kappert and published by Harrassowitz in Wiesbaden, has been taken over by a new editorial board: C. Dufft, G. Ghardashkhani, S. Guth, R. Haag-Higuchi and B. Sagaster. We invite you to inform us about upcoming publications emerging from studies and research projects in the fields of Arabic, Turkish/Turkic Persian/Iranian literatures. Manuscript proposals in the fields of modern, classical and popular literatures as well as other kinds of narrative media are welcome.

Die Arbeit untersucht die Kategorien Fremdes und Eigenes anhand ausgewählter Prosawerke türkischer Schriftstellerinnen aus den Jahren 1980 bis 2000. Was, von wem, wann und in welcher Art und Weise als fremd empfunden oder als fremd gedacht wird, hängt insbesondere von individuellen, sozialen und kulturspezifischen Aspekten ab. In den besprochenen Romanen und Erzählungen von İnci Aral, Ayla Kutlu, Latife Tekin, Erendiz Atasü, Nevra Bucak und Aslı Erdoğan spielt dabei die weibliche Perspektive eine wichtige Rolle. Die sechs Autorinnen repräsentieren einen wesentlichen Ausschnitt der türkischen Literaturproduktion nach 1980. Den einleitenden theoretischen Ausführungen folgen Hintergrundinformatio-nen über literarische Entwicklungen und den gesellschaftlichen sowie politischen Kontext der Türkei in der Zeit nach 1980.

Fremdheitserfahrungen zeigen sich in den analysierten Werken zum einen als soziales Phänomen: verschiedene Facetten der türkischen Gesellschaft werden beleuchtet; zum anderen tritt das Fremde als der fremde Ort und die fremde Kultur zutage: die Texte thematisieren die Auseinandersetzung mit Europa, der islamischen Welt und Lateinamerika. In den Aushandlungsräumen zwischen Fremdem und Eigenem sind darüber hinaus das Verhältnis der Geschlechter, Konzeptionen von Weiblichkeit und der Diskurs um die eigene Identität von zentraler Bedeutung.

Religion, Mysticism and Modern Arabic Literature

2006. 178 pages, paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-05325-9

€ 48,- (D) / sFr 83,-

One of the significant phenomena in modern Arabic literature since the 1960s has been the use of mystical concepts, figures and motifs for the expression of contemporary experiences, philosophies and ideologies. The book investigates this phenomenon mainly with regard to the creative poetic process and the use of literary masks. It also deals with the complicated relationship between Arabic literature and Islam as well as with the literary activities by religious traditional circles. In a welter of publications committed Muslim authors try to prove that there is no inherent contradiction between art and Islam, and at the same time to lay the theoretical foundations for an "Islamist" poetics encompassing the various branches of literary production. Within the secular canonical circles, however, these activities and texts are considered extremely marginal and none of the authors concerned has gained any canonical status. The growing number of cases, in which attempts at censorship on religious and moral grounds have been challenged, prove also that Arabic literature has become more and more secular.

various aspects of and views on interculturalism, cosmopolitanism, stereotypes and cross-cultural literary trends in Turkic literatures and literatures in contact with Turkic culture and literatures, namely Greek, Russian, and Italian. The contributors, who come from nine different countries, examine topics from the analysis of the image of the "other" in Turkish or "neighbouring" literary texts to the investigation of literary techniques and trends as a device of interculturalism and cosmopolitanism and cover a period from the 18th to the 20th century. Also included are introductory chapters on the historical and political context of the contact areas discussed in the contributions.

Die Untersuchung konzentriert sich auf den bedeutenden Stellenwert der Stadt Istanbul im bisher wissenschaftlich eher wenig behandelten Werk des türkischen Autors Orhan Pamuk, Träger des Nobelpreises für Literatur 2006. Der Istanbuler Stadtteil Nişantaşı, in dem Pamuk aufgewachsen ist, wird als Ausgangspunkt für Pamuks Schreiben erkannt und als sein eigenbiographischer Raum definiert. Aus diesem Nukleus geht das Istanbul im Werk hervor und wird zur semantisch reich aufgeladenen zentralen Figur für das Aufeinandertreffen von osmanischer Tradition und westlich ausgerichteter Moderne. Nach einer ausführlichen Darstellung des eigenbiographischen Raumes, welcher die zeitliche und räumliche Vielfalt des ausgedehnten Raumes Istanbul gleichsam präformiert, folgt eine umfassende Analyse der Stadt Istanbul im Werk Orhan Pamuks.

Seit ihrer Loslösung von den Vorbildern der klassischen arabischen und persischen Literatur in der 2. Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts konnte sich die türkische Literatur von einer relativ unbedeutenden Literatur am Rande Europas zu einer produktiven Nationalliteratur in der jungen Türkischen Republik und weiter zu einem dynamischen und wettbewerbsfähigen Zweig des globalisierten Literaturbereichs entwickeln. Dieser bisweilen abenteuerliche Weg, der von scharfen Richtungsdiskussionen, Polemiken und politischen Verfolgungen gekennzeichnet war und ist, wird in diesem Band anhand ausgewählter Dokumente nachgezeichnet. Mit einer bewusst subjektiven Auswahl von kommentierten Auszügen aus Briefen, Interviews, Manifesten, Buchbesprechungen und anderen Texten, die hier meist erstmalig in Übersetzung vorgelegt werden, entsteht ein akzentuiertes Bild der Geschichte der türkischen Literatur der letzten 150 Jahre.

Turkish Literature and Cultural Memory: "Multiculturalism" as a Literary Theme after 1980

2009. 257 pages, paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-05825-4

€ 58,- (D) / sFr 99,-

The emergence of Turkey as a nation-state at the beginning of the twentieth century was accompanied by a radical alienation from the multinational Ottoman Empire and its multicultural heritage. This break resulted in a gap in the collective memory of Turkey, turning the country's recent history into a "blind spot" reflected as well in Turkish literature, which for decades was largely marked by the absence of any mention of the country's multicultural past. It was only in the years following the coup d'état of 1980 that the tendency towards (re-) discovery of "multiculturalism" as a literary theme, based on the Ottoman and Turkish past, emerged, resulting in the development of a new cross-social discourse that continues still today. The contributions in this book are the result of an international workshop held as part of the University of Giessen's Collaborative Research Centre Memory Cultures (SFB 434). They cover theoretical as well as socio-political aspects of cultural memory within the Turkish context and include comparative and transnational analyses of the theme in Turkey's recent cultural production. This collection covers significant ground, from the "Turkification" policies of the early Republican Era to Yaşar Kemal's epic depictions of the aftermath of the Turkish-Greek population exchange, as well as Diyarbakır's multicultural life as remembered in works by the Turkish-Armenian author Migirdiç Margosyan and multilingual Kurdish author Mehmet Uzun, and much more.

Essays in Arabic Literary Biography

The three volumes of Essays in Arabic Literary Biography contain entries by leading specialists in the field of Arabic literature studies devoted to the major representatives of the literary heritage of Arabic culture within three specific periods: 950-1350 (ed. Terri DeYoung); 1350-1850 (ed. Joseph E. Lowry and Devin Stewart); and 1850-1950 (ed. Roger Allen). Each volume attempts to reflect larger movements of cultural development and change within the realms of literary production and commentary during the given period. While the major names associated with each period are to be found, a particular effort has also been made to reflect the geographical diversity of the Arabic-speaking regions in the different historical periods involved.

The tenth through twelfth centuries was a period when Arab Islamic culture was experiencing dramatic growth and the entire Mediterranean area—extending from the Iberian Peninsula in the West to the banks of the Sind River in the East—came increasingly under its sway. The Islamic world had assimilated and consolidated a variety of influences from earlier times and other places, and now major intellectuals were turning their attention to producing new responses to the changed environment around them. These included innovations in the forms of literature, and engagement with new themes and ideas. The volume edited by Terri DeYoung and Mary St. Germain includes essays on Hispano-Arab authors as well as those writing in various capitals in the Arab East, those who wrote in other languages besides Arabic and those who were inspired to bring new literary approaches to religious sensibility, including members of the Shiite and Sufi communities alongside the more numerically dominant Sunnis. Every essay is self-contained, beginning with a list of the author's complete works (and translations of them), and then proceeding to chronicle the subject's life through a thorough examination of the principal works attributed to him. Each essay concludes with a selected bibliography of reference works.

the collection as a whole is a period characterized by institutional change, competition, conspicuous virtuosity, and diversity - when Christian and Shiite writers also played important roles. Although modern scholarship has seen these centuries as mired in cultural decadence and decline, the literary figures in this volume display astonishing inventiveness, both in their understanding and appropriation of the Arabic literary tradition as well as in their many formal innovations.

Essays in Arabic Literary Biography, vol. 3 (1850-1950) is the third and last in a series of works that select 40 authors from a particular time period in Arabic literary history and invite leading experts to contribute biographical essays on them. In the case of this final volume, the period involved is that between the purported earlier phases in the emergence of a movement of cultural revival in the 19th century and the Arabic-speaking world's achievement of independence in the wake of the conclusion of the Second World War.

The essays, which discuss authors in a variety of literary genres and across the spectrum of the region concerned—from Iraq in the East to Tunisia in the West—provide clear evidence of the gradually changing roles of the indigenous and the imported which are an intrinsic feature of the movement known in Arabic as al-nahda (cultural revival) and the way in which Arab littérateurs chose to respond to the inspiration that such changes inevitably engendered.

Each essay is complete in and of itself, listing the author's complete works (and translations of them), and tracing the different phases of his or her life through an analysis of the principal works involved. The essays conclude with a selected bibliography of reference works.

Many Ways of Speaking About the Self

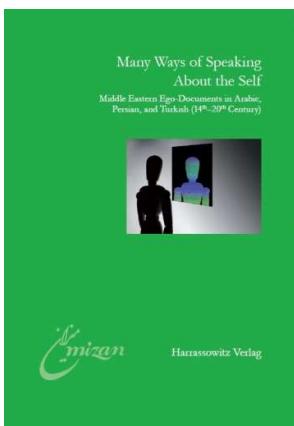

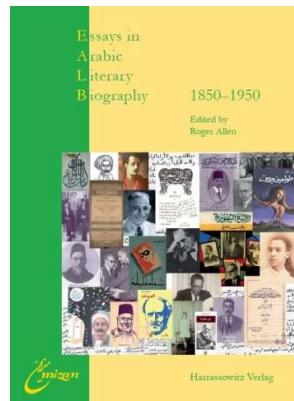

Middle Eastern Ego-Documents in Arabic, Persian, and Turkish (14th–20th Century)

2010. 223 pages, fig., 4 tables

ISBN 978-3-447-06250-3

€ 56,00 (D) / CHF 96,00

Like other people, Middle Easterners sometimes feel the urge to speak or write about themselves. They have been and are doing this in letters, on the margin of books, in large autobiographical accounts, travelogues and several other genres of oral and written texts. This collection of articles edited by Yavuz Köse and Ralf Elger explores "ego-documents", i.e. writings in which an ego speaks, produced in Arabic, Persian or Turkish between the 14th and the 20th century. The concept of "ego-document" is applied for the first time in a larger scale in Middle Eastern Studies, which in the past devoted much energy to often futile discussions about "Oriental individuality". This volume, more interested in literary criticism than in the history of mentalities, may encourage new viewpoints on a vast and highly varied, but under-researched branch of Middle Eastern literatures.

Landschaft und Utopie

Studien zur erzählten ‚Natur‘ in der arabophonen und frankophonen Literatur Marokkos

2010. Paperback, XII, 158 Seiten

ISBN 978-3-447-06382-1

€ 36,00 (D) / CHF 63,00

Was ist eine schöne Landschaft? Was für ein Verständnis von Natur wird durch eine solche Landschaftswahrnehmung 'sichtbar'? Und was für ein Bezug zur natürlichen Umwelt manifestiert sich darin? Die vorliegende Studie fragt nach Naturverständnis und Naturwahrnehmung in der marokkanischen Gesellschaft und nähert sich diesem Thema durch eine Untersuchung von Landschaftsbeschreibungen in der arabo- ebenso wie der frankophonen Literatur Marokkos. Grundsätzlich wird – im Anschluss an insbesondere französische Landschaftstheoretiker – Landschaft als ein kulturgechichtliches Phänomen verstanden, als auf eine kulturell spezifische Weise konstruierte Natur. Landschaft ist damit ein 'kulturelles Gut', das mit verschiedenen Werten und Bedeutungen versehen wird und das auch in literarischen Texten ausgedrückt und mitgeformt wird. Im Mittelpunkt des Interesses stehen dabei insbesondere für die marokkanische Literatur charakteristische utopische Landschaftsräume, in denen ein anderes, besseres Leben als möglich imaginiert wird. Solche utopischen Landschaften sind immer auch ideale Landschaften und formulieren in exemplarischer Weise Natur. Ausgehend von Texten von Laila Abuzaid, Souad Bahéchar, Mohammed Khair-Eddine und Muhammad Berrada analysiert die Studie verschiedene solcher utopischen Landschaften und zeigt, dass der Kern der marokkanischen ästhetischen Landschaftserfahrung der Garten ist. Wesentlich für dieses Landschaftsparadigma ist die Trennung zwischen einer wilden, unkultivierten, 'unschönen' Gegend und einer kultivierten Garten-Landschaft: Nur eine solche Garten-Landschaft ist schön, eigentlich, wesentlich.

From New Values to New Aesthetics:

Turning Points in Modern Arabic Literature

Since the emergence of the modern Arab intellectual in the 19th century, Arabic literature has not only followed and critically commented on socio-political and cultural change, but also contributed to its implementation. Focusing on crucial moments and factors, as well as figures, ideas and organs, the two volumes of From New Values to New Aesthetics approach Arab 'writer-scribes' and their works from two angles:

From Modernism to the 1980s

2011. 176 pages, paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-06600-6

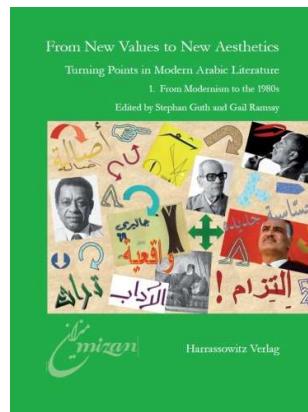

€ 49,00 (D) / € 50,40 (A)

This volume revisits the history of post-WW II modernism, with the goal of identifying Turning Points in Modern Arabic Literature up to the 1980s. It brings together a group of in-depth analyses of a broad mosaic of Arabic cultural creativity, including novelistic writing, poetry, and drama.

One line of focus is the centrality of the Nobel laureate Nagib Mahfuz with regard to literary renewal in the Arab world. Several articles emphasize the fact that this author not only kept abreast of changes in his own society's literature, but also created them.

Other contributions explore East-West cross-currents that prompted new styles of writing in both poetry and prose fiction. How, for example, has the concept of nationalism influenced the representation of Europe in Arabic literature? Is it fruitful to compare the rise of the modern novel in Western and Arab societies? Is a focus on the personal and individual—until recently considered a feature of 'Western' writing—slowly taking precedence over traditional Arab rhetoric, even in a 'stronghold' of nationalist narrative such as Palestinian literature? And how were Western techniques of drama and staging instrumental in forming an avant-garde Arabic theatre that spoke to the hearts and minds of an Arab audience?

A third focus of attention is on literary magazines such as Shi'r in Lebanon and Gālīrī 68 in Egypt, which were important sources of inspiration for modernist expression and avant-gardism.

From New Values to New Aesthetics

Turning Points in Modern Arabic Literature

2. Postmodernism and Thereafter

Edited by Stephan Guth and Gail Ramsay

Harrassowitz Verlag

The contributions in vol. 2 explore what from today's perspective may appear as 'pre-Revolution' literature.

The 15 studies assembled in this volume aim to identify the essential features of the paradigmatic shift whose early heralds appeared on the horizon during the 1990s. In doing so, they discuss a large variety of phenomena and factors that contribute to the process of shaping the new period:

- globalisation and the emergence of the Arabic 'best-seller';
- at the same time, decentralisation and the emancipation of hitherto relatively marginal countries and local voices;
- anti-elitism and a concomitant trend that involves writing in dialect and/or to give way to 'kitsch';
- related to the above, the individual's access to the world of essentially human and natural, yet highly tabooed desires and pleasures;
- the ever-increasing importance of the female voice;
- the general disinterest in, and the wish to deconstruct, former grand narratives and a corresponding eagerness to explore new terrains: intimacy, individual sensations, emotions, the encounter with the Other or with nature;
- and, lastly, a tendency to 'autofiction'.

Common to all the above is the conviction that a new era is dawning and that change is overdue. 'Late (or Post-) Postmodernism,' 'New Humanism,' '(New) Critical Realism' are terms for simultaneous trends on the global level. In Arabic literature, the period will probably simply be called 'pre-Arab Spring'.

Borders and Beyond

Crossings and Transitions in Modern Arabic Literature

Edited by Kerstin Eksell and Stephan Guth

Harrassowitz Verlag

Borders and Beyond examines various aspects of liminality, hybridity and border-crossing in Arabic literature and culture. Most of the contributions deal with contemporary phenomena, such as post-war Lebanon, and especially Beirut, as a border-zone par excellence; the oscillating between identity and difference/alienation in exile; the ambiguity of migrant existences between loss (of the familiar) and profit (from the new, unfamiliar, yet promising), between utopia and dystopia, inside and outside perspectives; between reality and the intrusion of magic, or the surreal, into the reality of precarious lives. But contemporary Arabic literature itself too has stepped across the borders and begun to lead a 'life beyond', as part of a global continuum, with all the mergings and contrasts this entails.

The dynamics of change and transition are however not restricted to the contemporary scene. Thus, one contribution follows the transformations of the Andalusian legend across the Mediterranean as a process of transcultural migration and a literary subgenre's wandering through time and space. Another study highlights the interaction between incoming new concepts like 'novel' or 'fiction' and old indigenous counterparts such as riwāya.

The volume focuses on the very processes of change in the literary landscape, the moments of transition from one stage to another, when established traditions are exposed to new influences which cause generic transformations and produce new syntheses.

Borders and Beyond is the result of a Lebanese–Scandinavian cooperation.

Berna Moran (1921–1993) gilt als der Urvater der türkischen Literaturwissenschaft. Seine insgesamt dreibändige Geschichte des türkischen Romans ist in der Türkei bis heute das Referenzwerk schlechthin.

Dieses auch den deutschsprachigen Lesern zugänglich zu machen, war ein Gebot der Zeit angesichts des Interesses, das türkische Literatur in Deutschland findet. Band 1 spannt einen Bogen von den großen osmanischen Autoren des 19. Jahrhunderts (der sogenannten Tanzimatzeit) bis zu den modernen Klassikern der jungen türkischen Republik, von Samipaşazade Sezai (1860–1936) bis Ahmet Hamdi Tanpinar (1901–1962). Während einige Kapitel dem Gesamtwerk oder herausragenden Werken einzelner Autoren gewidmet sind, formuliert Moran in anderen Abschnitten eine Synthese, die gerade bei Lesern, die mit der türkischen Literaturlandschaft weniger vertraut sind, eine Vorstellung von thematischen Schwerpunkten und Entwicklungsbögen entstehen lässt. Insbesondere die kulturelle Konfrontation zwischen „Ost und West“ ab Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts, zwischen der literarischen Tradition des Osmanischen Reichs und den Romanen Europas, nimmt für Moran eine Schlüsselfunktion ein, will man die Entstehung des türkischen Romans begreifen. Aber auch die veränderte kulturelle Konstellation nach Gründung der Türkischen Republik 1923 und deren Widerschein in den Romanen jener Zeit gehören zu den grundlegenden Themen von Morans Literaturgeschichte. So ist die Lektüre dieses Werkes auch für Leser außerhalb der Türkei faszinierend und gewinnbringend zugleich.

For a long time, crime fiction has been considered popular literature – an assessment that prevented serious critical engagement with it. It is only in recent years that critical literary theories have begun to be applied to genres such as crime fiction, while at the same time the interest of literary scholars in crime fiction by authors not belonging to the European-American ‘Western’ cultures has grown.

The articles assembled in this volume seek to address the role of crime fiction in and around the Eastern Mediterranean in countries such as Turkey, Greece, Morocco, Algeria, Syria, Saudi-Arabia, and Egypt, focusing on generic, terminological, literary critical, social, and cultural themes. The book is intended to be an invitation for literary scholars doing research on different literatures of the Eastern Mediterranean to compare and discuss their results and to engage in further research in this field.

Wie soll man umgehen mit dem Verlust einer Welt, die man einst Heimat nannte? Das Exil, Herzstück dieser literaturwissenschaftlichen Studie, schreibt sich in eine Reihe von Phänomenen ein, deren exponentieller Aufschwung während des vergangenen Jahrhunderts zunehmend flüider werdende Welt-, Kultur- und Seinsordnungen nahelegt. „Migratorische Ströme" wie jene, die durch die Revolution des Jahres 1978/79 im Iran ausgelöst wurden und große Teile der nationalen Elite dauerhaft außer Landes zwangen, fordern eine Auseinandersetzung mit den Bedingungen, dem Wesen und den Konsequenzen einer „dynamisierten Welt“ sowie mit der daraus resultierenden Kulturproduktion.

Ausgehend von der Annahme, die von erhöhter Dynamik durchzogenen Produktionsräume des Exils wirkten sich maßgebend auf das literarische Schaffen aus, ergründet Angelika Frühwirth die Narrative der im transkulturellen Raum angesiedelten Prosa iranischer Exilautorinnen und geht dabei diesen Fragen nach: Welchen ästhetischen Konzepten gemäß übersetzen die Autorinnen aus verschiedenen Kulturen Rezipienten, an unterschiedlichen Orten und zu abweichenden Zeiten Geschehenes, „Eigenes“ und „Fremdes“ in eine individuelle Erzähl- und Sprachform? Welche Rolle spielt dabei weibliche Autorschaft und inwiefern könnten jene literarischen Eruptionen „an der Peripherie“ stellvertretend für eine Wende globaler Weltordnungen und die Zukunft gesellschaftspolitischer Konstellationen gelesen werden?

Social criticism has been a pervasive element in modern Arabic literature since its beginnings. This book is concerned with social criticism in blog narratives against the background of a long tradition of criticizing society through literary expression in the Egyptian national framework. It is also about ways in which the Arabic literary heritage, classical and contemporary, is put to work and recycled in Egyptian Arabic-language blogs.

Readers will become aware that a number of the same societal and political problems that have been and still are treated in literature are brought up in Egyptian blogs. While social criticism will be shown to be a common thread in literary expression and blogging in Egypt, a central question is how bloggers use their cultural and literary heritage to advance their goals of changing social and political reality. The bloggers give voice to core problems with which an early blogging generation was and continues to be concerned.

Some were discontented with the inability of the government to provide them with the democratic liberties they requested. Others emphasized the necessity to solve the urgent problems of poor governance, corruption and poverty.

The book concludes that if the root problems are not addressed and the old order not removed, real change cannot take place. The question is what picture literature and social media including blogs will present to us henceforth: one of a society taking steps towards real change, or one reflecting the status quo with circumscribed individual liberties and lack of social reform.

Promethean Encounters

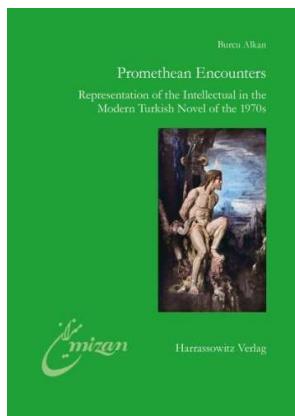

Representation of the Intellectual in the Modern Turkish Novel of the 1970s

2018. XI, 144 pages, Paperback
ISBN 978-3-447-10983-3 (print), 978-3-447-19736-6
(e-book)
€ 39,- (D)

The Turkish novel of the 1970s was significantly shaped by the leftist activism of the 1960s and the prosecutions following the military intervention on 12 March 1971. While the repercussions of these two decades determine the politics of the majority of novels published in this period, the worlds they depict extend far beyond. In such a definitively political and historical turn in the Turkish literary sphere, the position of the intellectual emerges as a key theme in many works, along with the legacy of the transition from the Ottoman Empire to the Turkish Republic and the modernization project that followed.

Promethean Encounters primarily examines Adalet Ağaoğlu's Ölmeye Yatmak (1973), Attilâ İlhan's Biçağın Ucu (1973) and Yaraya Tuz Basmak (1978) as well as Füruzan's Kirk Yedi'liler (1974) along the lines of the interrelations among intelligentsia, state, and public. It focuses on the intellectuals' disengagement from the state, their failure to relate with the people, and the consequences of such disconnections. As it contextualizes the concept of the intellectual within an international theoretical framework, its analyses both provide an in-depth view of the literature of the period and address the enduring contemporary conflicts.

Tradition and Reception in Arabic Literature

Essays dedicated to Andras Hamori

Arabic literature is always an expression of its continued literary heritage. This volume, edited by Margaret Larkin and Jocelyn Sharlet, investigates innovative ways in which poets and writers challenge our understanding of the Arabic tradition in the global humanities.

Chapters on poetry explore a formal rebellion against the critical tradition and the use of intertextuality and diverse genres. The reception of the "worst poem" by the great poet al-Mutanabbi that could also be viewed as one of his best, is analysed as well as the use of the tradition to express mystical ideas. Chapters on language examine the origins of caseless Arabic in a tradition that values the use of case in poetry, scripture, and other prose, and different scholar's systems of investigation. Chapters on prose literature analyze the relationship between the Persian and Arabic traditions in the work of Ibn al-Muqaffa', court writer of fiction and political thought, and the role of legal procedure, witnesses, and written evidence in the work of a judge and writer. Three chapters on the Arabian Nights analyze the unusual figure of the female rogue in two story cycles within and beyond the Nights, psychoanalytical intertextuality of the Nights and Proust, and the role of recognition in the reception of the Arabian Nights in scholarship, fiction, theater, and cinema from around the world.

Literary Visions of the Middle East

An anthology of canonical masterpieces of Arabic, Persian, Turkish and Hebrew fiction (mid-19th to early 21st centuries)

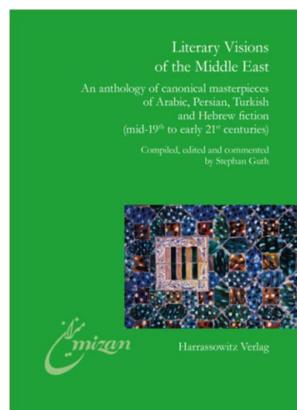

2019. VIII, 544 pages, 1 figure, Paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-11106-5

€ 48,00 (D) / € 49,40 (A)

This anthology assembles, in English translation, more than forty prose texts of modern Arabic, Turkish, Persian, and Hebrew fiction, from the 19th century reform period until the early 2000s. Each of them can be regarded as having attained canonical status – not only because they display "typical" stylistic features of the periods to which their respective national literary historiographies usually ascribe them ("Reformism," "Romanticism," Socially critical Realism," etc.), but also because they mirror, in an exemplary manner, the political and social situations in their countries at the times they were written.

As unfiltered comments by Middle Easterners who lived through decisive phases of their societies' development and experienced the ups and downs of their peoples' histories, the voices that speak from this collection have the quality of representative sources that grant us immediate insight into Middle Eastern lifeworlds. They make us relive the conflicts, dreams, traumata, desires and emotions of Arab, Turkish, Iranian and Israeli society at certain points in history and give us access to the worldviews and creative imagination with which authors meet and process the changes and challenges they register. The introductory paragraphs preceding each text provide background knowledge and the "red thread," their ensemble combining to a literary history of the Middle East in a nutshell.

The Wiles of Women as a Literary Genre

A Study of Ottoman and Azeri Texts

2019. 190 pages

ISBN 978-3-447-11287-1

€ 48,- (D) / 49,90 (A)

The wiles of women are a literary theme that has been treated from ancient Egyptian narratives to twenty-first-century TV series. The theme reached its greatest flowering in literatures of the Islamicate world, beginning with Surat Yusuf of the Qur'an and inspiring entire literary traditions in Arabic (Kayd al-Nisā), Persian (Makr-e Zan[ān]), and Turkish (Mekr-i Zenān). While some scholarly work exists on the Arabic and Persian traditions, the Turkish tradition has not received significant scholarly attention to date. The present study aims to fill this gap. In so doing, the study presents, transliterates, and translates into English seventeen hitherto unexamined prose stories on the wiles of women in Ottoman and Azeri Turkish. The first part of the study establishes a morphology for the stories and proposes a definition of the literary genre they represent. Both the morphology and the genre definition are designed to accommodate future additions to the corpus. The second part of the study engages in an in-depth analysis of the genre's treatment of the wiles-of-women theme, extrapolating a broader worldview from this treatment.

The proposed morphology divides the genre into three main categories which present a wide spectrum on the treatment of the theme. For instance, stories may view the wiles of women as evil and dangerous; as frivolous and amusing; or as thoughtful and instructive. Still, the categories all share the a priori assumption that women are intrinsically and incorrigibly guileful. The same does not hold for men, whom the stories grant moral agency and the capacity to learn from their mistakes. Story arcs in Mekr-i Zenān often feature men falling for the wiles of women, suffering as a result, and learning a lesson in the end. Women, in contrast, showcase no personal development. What emerges is a view of the world as a moral testing ground for men, and of women as a divinely ordained obstacle/mediator between men and a morally upright life.

Nevertheless, many Mekr-i Zenān stories employ humor and ambiguity, for instance by casting men in the guileful role, to enable a more nuanced view of social and gender relations than generic conventions suggest.

The first monograph offering a definition of the 'wiles of women' as a genre in its own right, David Selim Sayers' pioneering study fills a major vacuum not only in Near East scholarship, but also in gender studies and comparative literature.

Arabic Literature in a Posthuman World

Proceedings of the 12th Conference of the European Association for Modern Arabic Literature (EURAMAL), May 2016, Oslo

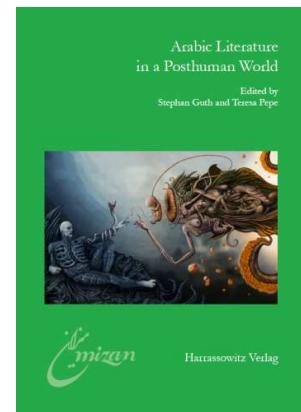

2019. XXVIII, 400 pages, Hardcover

ISBN 978-3-447-11261-1

€ 78,00 (D) / 80,20 (A)

Arabic Literature in a Posthuman World analyzes the many ways in which contemporary Arab authors view and comment on a world that is dramatically changing and disintegrating, a world characterized by an abandoning of the project of the modern nation-state as it had been promoted ever since the late 19th/early 20th century, and with it an abandonment of the idea of creating a better, more humane world for the larger community. The post-'Arab Spring' world is a world full of violent conflict, social instability, ideological vacuum and political collapse, a world where there does not seem to be any place for humanity any more. The spread of new technologies and media added, this world not only appears inhumane, but also posthuman, a world of monstrosity in which mankind no longer controls its own destiny. Authors react to this with a writing of a new quality that makes the old humanist project of an Arab nahda appear as a failed utopia.

23 specialists of modern Arabic literature shed light on the many aspects of this production. While a first section of the book focuses on the increased interest that authors assign to the past as a shaper of the present, the other parts highlight several subversive techniques with which the writers try to resist and counter ubiquitous de-humanization. Subversion I: Contested Spaces looks into attempts to preserve or create niches for the human being, both physical and metaphorical. Subversion II examines the booming genres of new Arabic Science Fiction and Dystopia while Subversion III deals with methods of Countering/Resisting Fragmentation, Dispersal, Loss, Oblivion. But also Satire and Rap (Subversion IV) are genres in which Arab creativity tries to reassert humanity against all odds.

The volume is the first to explore what Ihab Hassan's term 'posthuman(ism)', widely debated already in Western contexts, but only there, may mean in other parts of the world.

Le récit criminel arabe / Arabic Crime Fiction

2021. VI, 268 pages, 3 diagrams, Paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-11576-6.

Arabic fiction has thematized crime ever since the classical period. However, the existence of detective stories or, more generally, of crime fiction as a genre within Arab culture has yet to be fully acknowledged. This book therefore offers both a theoretical reflection on this genre in its context and a set of studies on instances of crime fiction in the Arab world. Covering a vast historical and geographical range, it tackles famous writers as well as authors of young adult fiction, deals with the current practitioners of noir as well as with classical detective stories, and also focuses on the adjacent fields of film and television production.

Le récit criminel arabe thus fills a theoretical and historical gap in current scholarship. Bringing together specialists of Arab literature and cinema and/or crime fiction, it provides an overview of a rich and varied genre, at the crossroads between the narrative, philosophical, and legal traditions of the Arab world, the realities of contemporary society, and the international forms of crime fiction. It thus demonstrates that Arabic crime fiction does, indeed, exist, even though it is not yet fully recognized by the publishing market and academic institutions.

Nation and Identity in Turkish Crime Fiction

Reading Ahmet Ümit's Novels as a Medium of Ideological Negotiation

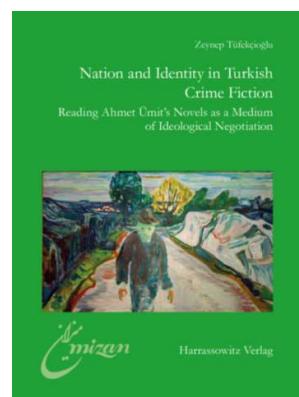

2021. X, 243 pages, Paperback

ISBN 978-3-447-11578-0

Best known for his crime fiction, Ahmet Ümit is among the most celebrated and prolific writers of contemporary Turkish literature. Yet despite its popularity in Turkey, and increasing recognition abroad, Ümit's fiction has seldom been subject to scholarly inquiry.

Adopting the framework of cultural narratology, Nation and Identity in Turkish Crime Fiction provides the most comprehensive analysis to date of Ahmet Ümit's crime novels, seeking thereby to fill a gap, and also to widen our understanding of the politics of the Turkish novel by extending the focus of literary and cultural criticism to include the field of contemporary popular literature.

Through a consideration of the transformations and changing dynamics that have marked Turkish culture and politics over the last two decades, Zeynep Tüfekçioğlu conceptualizes Ümit's fiction as a medium of ideological negotiation. The study unveils the significance of the various narrative techniques, literary tropes and themes found in Ümit's fiction, which he employs to contest dominant discourses of national identity, history, and cultural memory. Tüfekçioğlu shows that since his early novels, Ahmet Ümit has been following and adopting the global trends in the genre, while also appropriating and subverting them for the purposes of cultural resistance. As such, this book will appeal to scholars of Turkish literary and cultural studies, as well as to scholars and devoted readers of crime fiction.
